GENERAL NEWS.

The smallpox epidemic at the General Hospital, New Haven, Conn., continues unabated. Despite every possible effort to check the progress new cases are breaking out each day.

Auditor W. K. Ackerman, of the World's Fair, has tendered his resignation, and has informed the local executive committee that a leak existed between the Treasurer's office and the gates.

An attachment was issued Thursday by the Superior Court of Baltimore, against Richard Mansfield, the actor, based on a protested note for $200 in favor of Jas. McVior, of New York. The note was presented in St. Louis Nov. 1.

A heavy snowstorm. Thursday throughout Missouri and portions of Kansas, Southeastern Nebraska and Southwestern Iowa will greatly benefit winter wheat. The fall of snow is as good as a heavy rainfall and has saved the winter wheat.

The Comptroller of the currency has approved the Continental National Bank, of St. Louis, Mo., as reserve agent for the Equitable National Bank, of Cincinnati, O., and the Fifth National Bank, of Cincinnati, for the Second National Bank, at Ashland, Kentucky.

Many of the Populists are now advocating the election of Mrs. Mary E. Lease as United States Senator from Kansas. Several attorneys declare they can find nothing disqualifying her from holding that position, unless, perhaps it may be the power of the Senate to pass upon its own membership.

The whole county of Cape May is greatly excited over the robbery of the house of Captain Elijah Wharton, of Yachoo. Captain Wharton and his family left home last Tuesday for a short visit to friends, and upon their return discovered that money to the amount of $35,000, which had been kept in a bureau, drawer was missing.

Joe Lane's wife, with a party of searchers, found his body floating in the Tennessee River near Moccasin Bend. Gunshot wounds told the story of his mysterious murder. Saturday he went out to kill a wild goose, taking but one load for his gun. He did not return. No view to the murderer or the cause of the deed.

The New York Clearing House gave an informal reception Thursday to William Liddell, who was president Governor of the Bank of England during the financial crisis of 1890-91. Nearly 100 bank Presidents and many Vice-Presidents attended. There were also present members of some of the large and well-known financial houses as well as the Presidents of all the trust companies.

A big deal has been consummated between the Southern and United Express Companies. The Southern will, on January 1, cease to operate over the Louisville & Nashville Road, and will be succeeded by the United Express Company. The Southern will then consume control of the Queen & Crescent route. These companies have been fighting each other in the South for years, and the deal is reported favorable to the United people.

Among the passengers who landed at New York from La Bourgoigne, from Havre, was a well-built broad-shouldered man in fashionable attire, whose particular upright bearing attracted the attention of Special Customs Inspectors Brown and Donovan. Inspector Donovan noticed something larger than a button bulging out at the back of his overcoat. He was taken into the examination room and obliged to remove his clothing. He wore about his body something that was a cross between a woman's corset and a life preserver. In it were contained 68 valuable gold coins.

THE VICTORY IN VERSE.

When the news of the great Democratic victory was received the Capitol's Poetry Machine was hauled out of the corner and dusted off. Its creaky joints being smoothed with the oil of joy, the following resulted:

Now sound the hew-gag, ring the bell,
And beat the drum accordin',
The G. O. P. has gone to—well,
The other side of Jordan.

I stood upon the hills and cried
The G. O. P. is dead
And out of sight—
And waiting echo there replied
And plainly said:
"That's right!"

"When freedom from her mountain height
Unfurled her standard to the air,"
She saw the tariff plan was right,
And said to Grover: "Put it there."

Bill McKinley
Felt it 'taly
When he said he had to go—
He dropped his head
And all he said
Was: "Oh, oh, oh, O' helgh ho!"

The G. O. P.
Has ceased to be,
As Democrats expected—
It died of grief—
A withered leaf,
Outcast and unprotected.

The good old days are crowding in.
When tariff rates won't bother tin.

"Here's to you," Bill McKinley, "and the missis and the kid;
Our orders were to do you, and,
of course, we went and did,
They may say your robber tariff left
you nothing more to loot,
But the manning of the business was the Democratic boot.

Benjamin pressed down his hat,
McKinley tumbled over,
The bosses ceased to "fry the fat,"
And the head played "Uncle
Grover."

The G. O. P. has folded its tents
And gone to you beautiful shore;
And it took very much to a man up a tree
Like they'll never come back any more.

About the North no longer now
That fatted milk-man swagers,
His mammoth robber-tariff cow
Has caught the Duck-eye-staggers,
The man who owned the negroes' vote,
Is on the old Salt River tow,
And in the cold air sneezes;
And every happy colored soul
Can go unmolested to the poll,
And vote just as he pleases.

When Adial out of Egypt came,
With added glory to his fame,
It gave the nation joy;
Hurrah, hurrah, the masses cried,
Hurrah, hurrah, the "fat is cried,"
Way out in Illinois.

Let every warp and woof be full
Of pure, unadorned and untaxed wool
"You may chalk it on the palins,"
And set it down as so,
That the time is fast approaching
When the rasicals have to go.

Oh Frick, oh Frick,
You cast that brick,
A bit too hard, and much too quick.

The rasicals go
No more to show,
Their spool of disorder.
No more to flirt
The bloody shirt,
Up the Free-State's border
Frankfort Capital.

With cholera increasing in virulence in St. Petersburg, and new cases continually appearing in Hamburg and Buda-Pesth, it is not by any means certain America will not be visited by the dread plague, in the not distant future. The attention of our City Fathers is respectfully called to this fact. Let to efforts that have been put forward in the direction of a proper sanitation of the city, be relaxed. The two deadly scourges of typhoid fever and diphtheria are always with us, and if, under the kind rulings of an Overruling Providence we escape cholera, the dire effects of typhoid and diphtheria may be abated.

Carlisle in the Cabinet.

There is a surprise in store for the local maker of Cabinets because they will have to take into consideration a new name. It is that of Senator John G. Carlisle, of Kentucky, and he is likely to be made Secretary of State. Since Mr. Cleveland's election they have been in prolonged consultation almost daily. Mr. Carlisle on Monday spent three hours with Mr. Cleveland. He visited him on Sunday and remained with him until nearly midnight. He spent almost the entire preceding day with Mr. Cleveland and his friends. The President-elect has talked with Senator Carlisle about all the issues of the campaign and asked his advice on many ticklish points. Mr. Cleveland thinks that Senator Carlisle is the man he wants for the position of Secretary of State—New York Herald.

And so do we. Mr. Carlisle is ripe with the political issue, is cool and level-headed, and with him as Secretary of State few mistakes would be made. The Democracy has said to the disconcerted, restless people that it can meet their needs and place them in a more prosperous condition. The pledges are out and must be met. Favorites is not what the country needs in such positions, or in any of the offices to be filled by the incoming Administration, but competent, thoughtful, men, from the Cabinet down to Storekeeper. Even applicants are not always the material from which to choose, but we should see to it that the men best suited to the positions are appointed, and in no instance do we want it said the Republicans conducted any office better or more to the satisfaction of all concerned than the Democrats.

THE SENATE'S DUTY.

The McKinley Bill went through the Senate solely as a party measure. Three Republican Senators voted against it, and several others who were still in the Senate—voted for it against their convictions and for party reason only.

Mr. Blaine clearly saw its folly and destructiveness. "He pointed out the fact that it did not open a market for a single additional bushel of wheat or barrel of pork, and used his influence with Senators to inject reciprocity into it as a possible saving clause.

The people have now twice condemned the measure with an emphasis which it is impossible to mistake. There is ample warrant, therefore, for every Republican Senator who supported the bill reluctantly as a party measure to aid in passing the pending remedial measures without waiting for the time when the controls of the upper house shall pass into Democratic hands. That will be good politics as well as patriotism.

Senator Allison for one seems to be of this opinion. He has said in an interview:

If the Democratic majority in the House of Representatives would content itself with proposing certain amendatory measures to the present law, as the redress of duty on woollen manufactures, and placing other articles, wool for instance, on the free list, it might be that no obstruction would be placed in the way of their passage by the Republicans of the Senate.

The Democratic majority has done just this. It has passed precisely the relief bills described by Senator Allison, and they are now pigeon-holed in a committee of which he is an influential member.

If the Republican party means to bow to the popular desire so emphatically pronounced, if Republican Senators contemplate a future for their party, if they have any sincere regard for the will of the people as opposed to the desires of the monopolies beneficiaries of McKinleyism, they will permit these measures of relief to become law at the ensuing short session.

Will the wiser Republican Senators see their duty and their opportunity rendered thus?

The next President is a Democrat?—N. Y. World.

The Pensions Did It.

One of the most potent reasons has been the course adopted by the Republican party with regard to pensions.

THAT JUBILEE.

On Friday night the Democrats of the city and county proceeded to celebrate the approval of the great political victory they won at the polls on November 8.

To say that it met the expectations of the participants would be putting it mildly. The Democrats had great reason to justify over the county, and those of Mr. Sterling and Montgomery county did it. The town was beautifully illuminated and the parade extensive. The Morehead Band and the Chiles' Drum Corps furnished music for the occasion. The Morehead Band is an excellent one and deserves a liberal patronage. We heard many compliments paid them. The Chiles' Drum Corps, of this city, is no slouch, and the boys did themselves proud.

Flora, transparencies, torches, men in horseshock and on foot, everybody in the best humor, made up the line of march.

The Tammany organization from our sister city of Winchester added much the pleasure of the occasion. But "Mr. Harrison and his Cabinet" was the most appreciated contribution from Clark's capital. They made a world of fun for the boys. Nothing seemed to so affect the boys as the doleful tune of the "President and the Cabinet," as they sang, "We're going home, We're going home, to stay forever."

The float representing "the old and unreliable stern wheeler, Ethan Spike," with its cargo board for Salt River, also attracted much attention. The following advertisement of the boat's departure was industriously circulated during the parade:

"The old and unreliable stern wheeler, Ethan Spike," after being safely anchored in "Sung Harbor" for four years, will again go to work, and will leave Mt. Sterling for Salt River on the 1st of March. Ethan Spike, 1st Mate; Bert Daniels, 2d Mate; Jo Bates, Captain.

On old Bartender, W. H. Holt, having been seen raised from an eight years' confinement at Frankfort, will resume his old place at the bar."

The Salt River packet seemed to have run against as many snags and stuck in as many sand bars as did the Republican party on the 8th.

As each disaster would occur, the crew would yell, "Landlady," "Hilney" etc., but when the stove turned over, the smoke stack fell with a mighty crash, and the boat caught fire, the boys insist that Eastin yelled, "H—!" as his fiddle went over one side, whilst he fell over the other. The last accident occurred in front of the National Hotel, the horses rearing and dumping the entire crew into the street. The crowd laughed, but the Captain insisted that it was done on purpose, to illustrate old Cleve's actions when he gets into harness next March.

After the parade and the fire-works display as many as could crowd in, adjourned to the Court House and listened to short speeches from Hon. O. C. Bowles, Hon. M. C. Lisle, Judge J. H. Hawley and Hon. W. H. Garner, of Winchester.

NOTES.

Jim Voris had the handsomest illuminated house.

Uncle Lewis Young, of Bath county, simply went wild over "Harrison and his Cabinet."

Dick Smith, Pension Agent, was busy preparing cases for the new Administration.

Judge French makes a splendid Grand Marshal. His lieutenants were admirably selected.

The Chiles Drum Corps should be made a permanent institution.
Joe Drawner, though a staunch Republican, is a still better drummer. He became so enthused as he marched with the Chiles Drum Corps that he imagined he was beating the entire Democratic party (except Hazelrigg) and stove in the head of his drum.

KENTUCKY BAPTISTS.

On Saturday, the 12th inst., after two days' meeting of the Ministers' meeting, the Association convened with the First Baptist Church at Cornington. The members and friends of this church had opened their homes to delegates and visitors, and the entertainment given was "right royal." To say that this meeting was profitable and interesting would be to use a stereotyped expression that would fail to carry with it a full meaning. The churches and district Associations were represented by their very best men, who had in their hearts the interest of the great cause of Christianity. Brethren on either denominations present were extended seats with the body and asked to affiliate in the discussion of all subjects which might come before the body.

On Sunday all of the churches of Covington and surrounding cities were opened to the Association and were supplied with preachers from that body.
The report of the Executive Board made a fine showing.
Combining State and district work, 2,100 persons were received by baptism and 1,500 by letter and relation into the churches as the result of missionary contributions and labors for the year. Sermons preached, 4,744; Bibles to sermons, 622,904; prayer meetings, 1,547; number present at these meetings, 72,631; religious visits, 20,221; families with out bibles, the most of whom were furnished gratuitously, 400; 9,172 pages of tracts distributed, and 82 new Sunday schools organized, with 6,375 pupils and 1,545 church members as teachers or pupils.

The statement of the Treasurer shows all indebtedness paid and a remainder Oct. 1st of $659.40.

The total contributions for the year ending Oct. 1, were $37,949.84, as follows: State missions, $5,580.60; S. S. and colportage, $2,256.19; Foreign missions, $10,180.70; Home missions, $9,550.93; District missions, $6,945.23; District S. S. and colportage, $2,271.01 and Mission Sunday school work for Missionary Society of Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, $305.28. The white membership, as shown by the minutes, is 143,228 active members. The numerical growth in the past ten years is 32 per cent, while that of the State population during the same time is 16 per cent.

The next meeting of this body will be held at Lebanon, Ky.

W. P. OLDHAM & CO.

Emory Wilson, one of the most prominent Republicans in the East, says the restriction of immigration will come before Congress in December. Mr. Wilson says that Senator Chandler has prepared a bill with that end in view, providing that emigrants make a three month's application to the United States Consuls abroad.

"Al." Smith, whose fame as a sporting man is international, made the greatest play of his life this week against four bank in New York. He won $22,400.

Of Course It Was Great.

Our neighbor, Mr. Sterling, sent down a big delegation Tuesday night to participate in the Democratic Jubilee, and in return Winchester was largely represented at Mt. Sterling last night, when she celebrated the great victory.

We go to press too early to give you the details of our neighbor's demonstration, but we all know Mr. Sterling never does anything by halves.—(Winchester Sun).

THE ADVOCATE.

Friendships of Women.

One of the pleasantest of friendships is that between a young and middle-aged woman. (There are no old women nowadays.) If the women are of exactly the right sort, the friendship is almost an ideal one. There can be no jealousy. The elder woman is too old to be envious of the younger either of her loves or companionship. The younger feels the superiority of her youth too keenly to care for the regard cherished by the older for her contemporaries. But each possesses a charm to which the other returns with never-ceasing delight.

The older friend smiles over but rejoices in the freshness and ardor, the eager anticipation and daring impulsiveness of her companion. She speaks no word of discouragement. It is beautiful, this demanding youth, this splendid audacity, to which all other earthly achievements are possible. It is the highest earthly wisdom to recognize that all this enthusiasm is needed for the lessons which Divine wisdom shall teach.

And the younger woman, pouring out her hopes and expectations, her passionate longings and wistful imaginings, feels strongly the mellow graciousness which experience has brought. Daily she wonders at the content that is always the most puzzling to the youthful heart. Contentment is only found upon mountain peaks, she thinks.

Yet the large-hearted charity which endures all things, believes all things, and hopes all things, is an ever-freshening surprise. Sometimes as she breathes its fragrance the vague question arises: "Is it possible that this charity, this contentment of themselves are attainments? Is it so? Can it be? Ah, no!"

No, no! For youth is the longing; for age the knowledge that the longing was never meant to be satisfied here. Each is best for its own time. In such a friendship each grace finds its complement in the other.—JENNIE MILLER MAGAZINE.

Value of Great Telescopes.

I should like to call attention to the fact that the history of the great telescopes at Mt. Hamilton and Washington will serve to lay away finally a widely-published opinion which we used to hear repeated every few weeks—namely, that great telescopes are of little use. The work of these two great telescopes (not to speak of many others) has conclusively shown their great superiority over less powerful instruments in every field of astronomy, in the observation of planets, nebulae, stars, comets, satellites, in spectroscopy, and also in those departments of astronomical photography for which they are adapted. Smaller instruments have their appropriate fields, and in some of these they will always be more convenient than larger ones. But the great telescope, when properly used, is always well for preeminence. The proof is easy to give, and I trust that we shall not hear any more idle detraction of the work of our great instrument makers, the Clerks, or of their European rivals.—NOVEMBER FORM.

Grown a Variety of Potatoes.

When a farmer hears that the consumers of his products pay much higher prices than he gets from the middleman it naturally sets him to thinking. But his first efforts at marketing do not usually prove the success he has expected. What is the matter? In nine cases out of ten the farmer who grows peddling does not try to keep a variety—maybe he could not if he did try except by purchasing to sell again. He goes up and down a street crying "Potatoes," and the housewife comes out and anxiously asks for potatoes. She has misheard, stood the call, and even if she wanted some potatoes, in her disgust she will go back without buying anything. Unless a farmer has on his land pretty much everything the market is supplied with he will not do well as a marketer. There is no reason why a farmer should not grow a greater variety than he attempts. It costs more thought, but not much, if any, more labor than growing the few varieties he now does. Even if it costs greatly more labor than now, he would make more, for he could and would sell nearly, if not quite, up to the retail prices charged by middlemen. One year's trial of this plan near a city or village will give a farmer customers who will learn to look for his wagon for the most of the produce that he grows or that they need to purchase.—AM. CULTIVATOR.

The Indian Game of Ball.

In an interesting article in the famous Indian chief, Black Hawk, in the November New England Magazine, the Indian game of ball is thus described: "On the level ground west of the town might frequently have been seen, in the early summer time and autumn, hundreds of brawny Indians engaged in their favorite sports of horse racing and ball playing. In either case the play was for stakes, and these always high—two or three horses, a fine rifle or war-club. Their game of ball, which Black Hawk mentions as very popular, was played in this wise: A tall post was erected at either extremity of the play-ground, and the players divided into rival parties. The object of each was to defend its own post and drive the ball to that of its adversary. Hundreds of lithe and agile figures, says Parkman, describing this game as played by the Sauts and Ojibwas near Michillimackinac in June, 1763, are leaping and bounding upon the plain; each is nearly naked, his loose black hair flying in the wind, and each bears in his hand a bat of a form peculiar to the game. At one moment the whole are crowded together, a dense throng of combatants, all struggling for the ball, at the next they are scattered again, and running over the ground like hounds in full cry, each in his excitement yelling and shouting at the height of his voice. Rushing and striking, tripping their adversaries or hurling them to the ground, they pursue the animated contest."—NEW ENGLAND MAGAZINE.

The Question of Pin Money on a Farm.

Nowhere is this lack of pocket money felt so much as among farmers' wives and daughters. Many of them go from positions in the city—teachers, typewriters, saleswomen, with a regular salary—a good cook can earn her fourteen dollars a month. She may marry a young farmer, and with all her life before her decide to be his helpmate and money-saver. How they work and struggle to pay off the farm, to get the necessary improvements made! But when the light is partly over, sometimes the young wife has a feeling of envy on Saturday nights, when her husband pays the "hands" who have worked for him, and has not a dollar for her. For she knows that they have been fed while she has served; that they have slept while she has lost hours of slumber with the precious babe in arms, and that they can buy clothes that she would feel it extravagant to wear.—EX.

Poultry Hints.

Never chase fowls, or run them down with dogs, but wait until they go on the roosts at night. They can be lifted off easily, taking each by the legs, and no liability of injury will result. A hen is very timid, and goes on the roost early, owing to the fact that when darkness comes on she is blind, and for that reason becomes an easy prey.

Now is the time to make drains to the poultry yards. Not only should the surface water easily flow away from the yard, but where poultry may be kept in large numbers, and more than the ordinary space is used, the drain should be laid below the ground which will serve to keep the yards dry, especially after a heavy layer of snow has melted.

If you have a lot of small chickens that were hatched late, and which are no larger than quails, sell them all, for they will not grow after frost comes. Such chicks will also be unable to endure the severe cold of winter and will bring a better price in market now than they will later on in the season.—MIRROR AND FARMER.

Have a Grindstone.

A good grindstone that runs true is a necessity on every farm. Place it under shelter, and wear it out as soon as possible by keeping all edged tools, usually sharpened with it, in a good workmanlike condition. When mowing or reaping, the knives often become dull ere it is time to turn out; if you have a piece of coarse whetstone in the machine box they are soon made quite sharp or at least the cutting edge roughened up as well as sharpened. A sharp file answers a similar purpose, but if carried in the machine box should be wrapped in cloth to prevent gumming, or useless wear against other iron tools. Teach the boys to keep all the edged tools in good condition, and never allow the dull axe to go to the field with a third axe, hoe, scythe or other edged tools, and insist upon the tools being ground at a uniform level. Remember that tools mean less time and more labor for man or beast.

WHERE THE GREAT ELK ROAMS

The Quetsa River, which flows into the Pacific Ocean about fifteen miles north of the Quinlan Agency, Wash., is a good-sized stream, very deep in places, and with rapids at intervals. Its waters are of a muddy, greenish hue very similar to the color of the St. Lawrence. It is fed by the melting snows of Mt. Olympus. The bottom land of the region has a rich black soil, and is covered with alders and salmon-berry bushes. The upland is shot clay, and is shaded by mammoth spruces and hemlocks.

To see great hoof-marks in those wild forests one might think the country overrun with cattle, but the appearance of those antlered monarchs known as elk, which are gradually being thinned out, owing to the merciless slaughter the Indians make upon them. Four or five canoe-loads of Siwash go up the Quetsa and Clearwater Rivers every few weeks in quest of elk, usually remaining a fortnight in the foot hills, during which time they kill many of the animals, often taking nothing but the hides, and leaving dozens of carcasses as food for wolves and cougars. Such proceedings should be stopped immediately. The reservation is amply large enough for the few Indians it contains and they ought to be made stay within its limits. A young man who accompanied them on one of their hunts informs me that when they discover where a band has crossed the river and climbed up the steep, wooded hillside, they forsake the canoes and start on the trail, going with the rapidity of wild animals first, but growing more cautious as the signs get fresher, and at last sneaking like a cat upon the unsuspecting elk. They invariably use the Sharp's rifle, 45-120, and with such a cannon it is not surprising a Siwash hunter recently killed two of these powerful animals at a single shot.

Black bears are quite numerous throughout the country, and are trapped successfully by the Indians. The ground is printed with their long, wide tracks any place you may look, though brain is exceedingly shy—more so, in fact, than the deer, which frequently goes at a person with a world of wonder in their soft brown eyes.—SEATTLE POST-INTELLIGER.

The Democrats will have an even 100 more Representatives in the next House than the Republicans, and a majority of ninety-five over all.

Walking for Health.

Few things, if any, are so effectual in building up and sustaining the physical organization as walking, if resolutely and judiciously followed. It is a perfect exercise. It taxes the entire system. When you walk properly, every member and muscle, every nerve and fibre, has something to do. The arms swing backwards and forwards, keeping step, as it were, with the legs; the chest expands and contracts as the lungs fill and discharge; the drummer-boy pulse beats a tune for the march; the legs curve and straighten; the feet rise and fall, while the head rides over all—but not as a deadhead. Every sense it has is employed, every faculty alert. The nostrils expand to quaff the breeze; the ears turn to every sound; the eyes roll in their sockets, sweeping from left to right, from earth to sky; the brain is at work through all its parts. Progress under such conditions is the very eloquence of physical motion. What is the effect? The flesh is solidified; the lungs grow strong and sound; the chest enlarges; the limbs are rounded out; the tendons swell and toughen; the figure rises in height and dignity, and is clothed with grace and suppleness. Hunters, who walk much, are tall and straight, while sailors, who walk scarcely at all, are low and squat. The whole man is developed, not the body merely. The mind is broadened by the contemplation of creation's work, the soul is enlarged, the imagination brightened, the spirits cheered, the temper sweetened. The moral forces are strengthened equally with the physical. A loftier, reverential feeling is awakened, if not a profound religious sentiment.—HALL'S JOURNAL OF HEALTH.

HOME DRESSMAKING.

THE IMPORTANCE OF HAVING GOOD BUTTONHOLES.

They Are One of the Prime Requisites to the Fine Appearance of a Dress. The Making of a Collar—Attention to Little Details Necessary.

(Copyright, 1892, by American Press Association.)

NUMBER II.

In the cutting of a dress the waist should be the first to be cut, and then the skirt, which can be made as simple as the amount of material will allow, but the waist will bear no scrimping.

When the waist has been pressed, then work the buttonholes. Cut the holes evenly, then "bar" them with coarse thread and overhand them, after which work the buttonhole solidly and well, for nothing looks more elegant than a well-made buttonhole. The buttons had better be left to the last, as thread catches around them. To get them on straight, run the two fronts together and pass an iron lightly over the buttonhole, or mark down through the holes with a pencil and sew the buttons on exactly there.

To make and sew a collar on a dress is a neat job, and if it is a plain one should be first cut out of strong wigan, and then basted on muslin or other lining, and then faced with silk or satin, whatever the outer material is made of. The collar is to be pressed with a piece of damp cloth laid between that and the iron. Then cut a neck exactly in the middle of the collar and fasten this to the center of the back seam, and tack the two ends to the front and baste them; then on the left side, however, must reach only to the line of buttonholes. The outer material, lining and wigan are all to be sewn in one seam with the waist of the dress and carefully basted first, and only sewn when sure it is right. The collar should then be raised and its position and the facing sewn down and the whole firmly pressed.

The bone casings can now be sewn in. They are better made of blast steel, but some use tapes and others the steel casing bones, but nothing is good as the regular whalebones, and on the proper adjustment of these very much of the beauty of the dress depends. Then, pins should be just wide enough to let the bone slide in snugly, and they must be sewn only to the seams and not where visible from the outside. Scrape the bones at the end with a piece of glass until the ends are smooth, and then the bone should be worn through the dress nor make an ugly hump. For very stout ladies the bones are doubled to the middle and shaved thin at the ends, and if placed in hot water a short time they can easily be sewn together with a fine needle. It is usual to place a bone in each dart in the side seams and one in the back.

When the bones are in, in the case belt, can be sewn in. This is to relieve strain about the waist, and is to be neatly diamond stitched in the middle of the back and the under arm seams, and it is finished by a hem and strong look and eye. Then the final finish around the bottom can be put on.

This can be done in many ways, but the standard is to finish it with the same material as the dress, or silk or satin. If of self goods, the facing extends the sixteenth of an inch below the waist, and the appearance of a piping. The silk lining requires that the outside be turned under so as not to show. In fact, the dress, from great care should be taken to see that it is trimmed exactly even, for crooked lines there mark the amateur at once.

The putting on of the facing to a blouse is a "nice job." It is better to baste first, then stitch the bottom and turn the facing up, basting it again, and then press it before the inside is finally folded down. That insures a perfect edge if cut straight. At the present moment sleeves vary greatly in shape and size, but they are all very easy to manage if the few fundamental rules are followed. A diagram here-with shows the main idea, which is that the under part of the sleeve is narrower than the top, and that the top is rounded, while the under side is hollowed at the top. The measure should be taken for sleeves from one inch back of the shoulder seam and carried down over the bent elbow to the wrist. The sleeve to be fashionable now should be of the leg of mutton, plain dipshod, with deep cuff, and the balloon in which the upper part is puffed and the fore arm part quite plain. The last requires a plain, medium sized foundation for the support of the balloon top. The leg of mutton can be made in many ways, the one most often seen having the upper part wrinkled. The sleeves now require a large quantity of material, usually three yards. The sleeve is sewn up, the seams whipped and the wrists finished with a neat piping, a cuff of velvet made over wigan, and then they are ready to be sewn in. From the two dots they should be gathered until just a fit for the arm size. The under arm seam is to be pinned to the front seam of the front side gore, and the sleeve is then pinned to an inch below the shoulder seam in the back. Baste the lower part of the sleeve to the top of the under arm seam, and then turn the sleeve toward you baste forward from the back arm seam, keeping the piping and basting to the top of the under arm. Then sew strongly and overcast.

All tailor finished dresses should have a piping in the sleeves as fashion will allow. Modified leg of mutton is now the accepted style, with the wrists left open an inch on the neck, and finished with a silk "arrowhead" or a row of very small buttons. Sleeves for silk or fine goods should have a bouffant effect just now, and will take much more elaborate trimming than wool.

It requires now about 6 1/2 yards of 36-inch goods for blouse and balloon or leg of mutton sleeve. Diagram of leg of mutton and balloon puff is given.

Lillian Emerson, widow of Ralph Widd Emerson, the poet, is dead, at the age of 90 years.

Mrs. Julia Ward Howe was re-elected President of the Society for the Advancement of Women at its convention at Memphis.

It transpires that the recent Georgia Legislature was illegally called together, and it is feared that grave complications may result.

Secretary Tracy, of the War Department, has granted a three years leave of absence to Lieutenant Peary, who will head another expedition to the Arctic regions.

It matters not who gets the few paltry offices in Ohio. The verdict of the Dacotah State against McKinley is so pronounced that the Republican candidate for Governor next year will not dare to run on a high-fal-lutin platform.—N. Y. World.

M. C. Lisle, M. C., of Maine or come! It's just the same, anyone you take him, and our people will have reason to be as proud of their Congressman as they have been of their candidate.—Winchester Democrat.

No, sir, we are an applicant for no office. Excuse us too if we think it is inadvisable to sign anybody's endorsement just yet. We wish everyone of you who "want something" could get it. We "want something" also—business for our paper. Give us this and you may divide the offices to suit yourselves.

The Republican National Committee has sent out an appeal to the party leaders throughout the country for more money. The appeal says that the committee is about $22,000 in debt, and Chairman Carter thinks the best way to get it is to call upon the "good" men of the party. He says the deficit was caused by big salaries to the campaign fund who craved at the eleventh hour, and failed to pay up.

For the information of our readers, we would like to print the list of the applicants for the several Federal offices that are expected to be vacant in the county after the 4th of March next. We are forced to disappoint them, however, since the list would be longer than a pension roll and almost as unobtainable as the vote for Cleveland and Stevenson, Jim Hazelrigg and Maria Lisle.

In our humble judgment, an extra session of Congress should be called by Mr. Cleveland at an early day after the inauguration. The people have demanded in unmistakable tones, a revision of the tariff. The Democratic party has promised it. Whilst we believe it is good policy in such grave matters to move slowly, yet the sooner the people are convinced that party they have placed in power means to fulfill its promises, the surer that party will be of their lasting confidence.

The Danville Advocate thinks "the Courier-Journal did nothing towards the wonderful Democratic victory." If it were possible to eliminate Waterson and his influence from the late line of battle, there would be found a great wide gap, through which the enemy would have swept, with an effect before which Sherman's march to the sea, would pale into insignificance. Our heart is great enough to make a mistake and acknowledge it, but he'd mean enough to sink in his tent, when the trumpet calls to battle.

The Democrats of this county and section have kindly said good things concerning the manner their press has conducted this campaign, which we appreciate in no small degree. Yet we have done no more than our duty. Our time, our talents, our money we gave in getting up and disseminating Democratic doctrine, and it shall always be our pleasure to thus serve our party and country. We only ask the co-operation of all people who love their country's cause. The more you aid us by extending our circulation, by giving us your patronage in advertising and job work, the more able will we be to contribute to political work. The Democratic press of Mt. Sterling need the Democratic patronage, and they certainly merit it. If you want your public servants to give you the full benefits of their powers they must live by the remuneration of their services. Likewise, if you want your press to successfully expose and defend your principles, you must hold up their hands. You should not wait for some representative to call and solicit your patronage, but, knowing your duty, you should call at their place of business and place your orders the same as your patron call on you. We would not wish to be understood as complaining, for we have received a liberal share of patronage and for it we are truly grateful.

Senator Pettigrew, of South Dakota—A Republican—says: "The most comforting thing resulting from this overthrow of the party is that it puts an end to William McKinley, Jr."

Yes, and along with McKinley the Democrats will put an end to McKinley, also.

The Populist retain control of the Farmers' Alliance by the re-election of President Loucks. C. W. Maene, the Democratic Leader, has withdrawn from the order, and declares his intention to start an Alliance of his own by organizing the cotton planters of the South into a gigantic trust, which will enable the planter to sell direct to the manufacturer. This, it is thought, means the complete divestment of the Northern and Southern wings of the Alliance.

Latest returns give the Democrats 222 members in the House, the Republicans 125 and the Peopoles party 7. Democratic majority 90.

The Homestead Strike is Over.

It has been apparent for some time that the strikers at Homestead were defeated in their strike against the Carnegie Company. Since, however, at a meeting of the lodge of the Anarchist Association it was decided by a vote of 101 to 91 to formally declare the strike off. The contest lasted five months, cost the company $1,000,000, the strikers half that sum in wages, and fifty-five deaths.

Very much of the Democratic press is answering the seers among the press, who are foretelling in such doubtful language the advent of calamities that are to befall the country with "We can trust Cleveland." Of course we can trust him. We have it to do. Grover has his way of doing things, and we are satisfied he will not depart from it, even to press his enemies. Grover is just a little miffed sometimes, but give him space and he manages "to get there."

Three cotton mills, one in Lowell and two in Providence, voted last Tuesday, just one week after the election, to increase the wages of their operatives. Yet the calamity howlers mind the ranks of the G. O. P. told us that Democratic success would mean a reduction of wages for the working-men to a pauper's basis.

The ten-year-old daughter of Jeptha Jones was killed at Decatur, Ala., by a sky rocket at a celebration in that city on last Wednesday. Mr. Jones and family went from this city to Decatur during the boom, and their many friends here will read the notice with sadness.

Mr. J. P. Ross, of this city, has a garden containing an eighth of an acre. On it he has raised this year, all the vegetables for his family, put up ten bushels of Irish potatoes, a quantity of canned goods, and from it fattened two hogs, which weighed four hundred pounds each.

THANKSGIVING.

The Old New England Thanksgiving
BY HERRICK BUTTERWORTH,
OF "The Youth's Companion."

There has been throughout the country a revival of the memories of patriotic history in the Columbian year. The next century is to be a children's century, and the school procession on Columbus Day led the way into the larger field of development and achievement. In last March the Puritan schoolhouse—Puritan only in name, for it was unsectarian from the beginning,—rises to the front again; the principles of the fathers come back,—liberty, character, education. A nation emphasizes that which it most values, and its character is known by the men it crowns. The Columbus centennial has emphasized education and crowned the schoolmaster. A grander century life is in the air; in the patriotic thought of Virgil, "the Destinies say to their stupides, 'Thus go on forever.'"

Thanksgiving Day is the day of the founders of the republic, and ought to be observed this historic year as never before since the days of the war. It recalls our noblest and best traditions.

Columbus Day is a secularism, Thanksgiving is the American feast of fatherhood and the Saturnalia. It is the day of the Lanes, of the rekindling of sacred household fires. It is the day of God.

A new thought has lately come into the public mind in regard to Thanksgiving as a harvest festival: it is that it is a day to be associated with the blessings of the fields of corn. A strong plea is made that Indian corn or maize should be adopted as our national flower. The reasons given for this selection have been passed over on record in Miss Edna Dean Proctor's poem in the Century, entitled "Columbia's Emblem." Corn was the most sacred emblem of the American races. It was sacred in the golden fields of Peru and Mexico. One of the greatest blessings that Columbus conferred on Europe was the gift of Indian corn.

"Five grains of corn" helped save the starving Plymouth Colony, dead in a famine, according to tradition, as a daily ration. The traditions of the cornfield are universal, belonging to the north, South and West. In few literature "corn" is the emblem of strength and immortality. It still has these suggestions. Indian corn has been one of the greatest blessings of God to the American race.

Already corn parties have become a popular entertainment. In such parties the rooms or halls are trimmed with corn, and the tables decorated with poetic productions of the cornfield. The food consists of all things that may be made of corn, including the historic succotash, Johnny-cake, shovel-cake, corn dodgers, and rye and Indian brown bread. Ryled corn is a showy and agreeable feature, and popcorn corn may enter into the decorations. Soup may be served, and corn-fed meats and fowl are in order. Decorations of corn, corn-slightly, and at "corn fields" husk mats and dolls may be offered for sale. At two such parties that we have attended Miss Proctor's poem on corn ("Columbia's Emblem") has been read, and at one address was made on the reasons why corn should be made the national flower, which involved a rich old poetic history. The history of corn would be the history of America, as that of oranges would be that of the Roman world.

The waving of the corn sheaves, offering under the manner of the Hebrew waving, would be an appropriate recognition of what is good in the literary exercises of such an occasion. The dinner of Thanksgiving Day in colonial times had several dishes that have generally disappeared, but that might well be revived. The succotash was one of the best. It was the meat, the hasty pudding, and the apple dumplings with potato cake, perhaps walnut or brown-bread "coffee," ended the meal. But were served in the evening, and walnuts and chestnuts were the favorites, and were cracked before the fire. The native game and the luxurious paudown were the choice things of the old-time meal. The whole roast pig was good, but the rabbit, pig, sheep, partridge, and quail—were more inviting. The popular roast turkey and the "Welsh rabbit" (rabbit) followed the colonial period. The earlier dinner was the better. It is well to serve the Thanksgiving dinner in old-time dishes where such as can be had. These service recalls associations that as object lessons are noble and inspiring.

NEW FIRM.

Having bought out the stock of Clothing, etc., from I. N. Phipps, and all of his accounts, we need the money and must have it. We owe the money today for the goods he had bought. His creditors want their money and the only way we have to get it is to collect his accounts. Call and see us at the old stand of I. N. Phipps.

YOUNG & HAZELRIGG.

The service should include the ancient forms of religious observance. The tabernacle psalms may appropriately be read, and the old Watts' hymns may be sung.

The festival should be, as of old, one of service to the poor. On Thanksgiving Day, as at the Roman Saturnalia and Saturnalia, and at the old English Christmas, all people should be equal, and should share their blessings in common. The most unfortunate, tempted and ignored should be made to feel the warmth and constraining influence of the day of charity.

In this year of 1892, old New England history may well be revived. We are making a new era; we are winding up the clock of the new century. It has become a custom to undervalue the local poet: it is an unworthy thing; nearly every town and neighborhood has some one who has the gift of writing poems well, and who feels the local inspiration. We as a nation should honor ourselves by the recognition of these rural singers.

Let Thanksgiving this year be a day in which the poets shall be called upon to interpret the past. He who loves the poetry of a nation will never be untrue to the nation's traditions.

Let this year be a secularism, a Thanksgiving of a hundred Thanksgivings.

Thanksgiving Day in the South.

BY REV. J. J. LEE, D. D.

It is only within recent years that Thanksgiving Day has been observed in the South.

The customs that accompany the day in New England, where the observance originated, are now generally allowed here. The people gather at their respective places of worship, where a sermon in keeping with the purpose of the day is preached. Even the traditional Thanksgiving dinner which, we learn from reading, is served in New England on such occasions, has come to be an important feature of the day in the South. Turkey, and cranberry sauce, and celery, and other things that are understood to be necessary to make up such a dinner, are found here in well-regulated families. Stores and other places of business are closed, so that the general appearance of things in cities reminds one of Sunday. The coming of the day is hailed with real pleasure, and it is embraced and used for the noble purpose of thanksgiving and praise. Corn, and cotton, and fruits, and other products of the field and the orchard, are arranged in the churches in shocks and heaps, while the whole is relieved and enlivened by chrysanthemums of various colors, roses, and other flowers that grow in the season. Those that relate to man's well-being and pleasure are accepted as expressions of God's disposition to provide for the wants of his children. Great preparation for the day is made in the market, and there is coming to be almost as much attention paid to it as to Christmas Day.

It is distinguishable from all other holidays in the South by the unusual quietness that prevails. It promises more of rest and hope and spiritual enrichment than do any of the days of a religious character set apart for us to observe. The immense number of small boys to be found in the South, and their capacity for making a noise, and the facility with which they secure fire-crackers and other things of like character that were created solely for the purpose of making a noise, have made of Christmas Day a season to be dreaded rather than to be enjoyed. It has never been used in the South as a day for the coming together of families. This has always been one of the leading features of the Christmas season. In fact, the week from Christmas Day to New Year's Day was formerly used in the South as a holiday week. The festivals and feast days and thanksgiving days of the year were crowded into this one season. Christmas time was to the Southern people what Thanksgiving Day was to the New England people. The Puritans magnified Thanksgiving Day, and discounted Christmas. Among the Southern people the Cavalier element predominated, and so they ignored Thanksgiving Day and emphasized the Christmas season. But now Christmas Day has gone to New England, and Thanksgiving Day has come South. The Puritan and the Cavalier have exchanged days, and with the mingling of days let us hope there will also come that mingling of sympathy and goodwill that both Thanksgiving Day and Christmas Day were intended to call forth and foster.

the need of fire for household comfort, I can recall but one Thanksgiving Day on which rain fell, or when the atmosphere was anything but genial and balmy. About San Francisco Bay, and extending back into our two great central valleys, Thanksgiving is a combination of in-gathering and out-putting; it is both harvest-home and seeding time in one. The early rains have served to clear the dust from trees and shrubbery, have washed the brown haze out of the air and softened the summer-baked soil sufficiently to allow the plowman to move.

Our Thanksgiving table presents some features difficult to realize at Massachusetts Bay. Spring and summer add of their stores to the solid products of autumn. The table is feetly practicable to garnish with apartments plentifully with garnish, grown roses, carnations, heliotropes, nasturtiums, pelargoniums, as well as with asters and chrysanthemums. Radishes and lettuce are available for relish, as they are, indeed upon any day of our year. Tomatoes can be had fresh from the vine, and green peas innocuous of the humiliating cast; strawberries and raspberries are easily obtainable. From at least one Thanksgiving table I wot of, the former have never been absent in twenty years. The great variety of grapes are still in prime condition; and these may be flanked by pomegranates by such as have taste and patience to eat them; while new raisins, almonds and walnuts give zest to gratitude for the largess of the year.

Thanksgiving Day.

Let every body return thanks. Not by keeping penancehouse and smearing business, by going out hunting, but close all business houses, rest from labor and go to the house of God and be thankful.

We have shared in multiplied blessings and surely a people whose enjoyments have been a bountiful store, health and happiness are grateful enough to give one day in three hundred and sixty-five in returning thanks to Him, the giver of every good and perfect gift.

Under the secret ballot the election passed off quietly at this place. RICH, RARE AND RACY

Was the Universal Verdict of Those Present.

The Regret of the Many That They Did Not Know.

No Postponement on Account of of the Weather.

Notwithstanding the windows of Heaven were apparently opened wide, and "the winds blew and the rains descended," last Thursday, the evening named for the "Basket Social," we venture to say there was never seen in this city a more select social gathering than this one. The young ladies' baskets were sent in early, as was requested, and a more tempting lot could not be found. So by the time the bells brought their beaux (it was a long year ago, you know), the committees on reception were ready to receive them.

There were 65 or 70, all told; so it was not difficult to pass the time, as every taste could be gratified, and the beauty of it was no crowd and jostle to make one cross-grained.

Music, talk, and the various games of the Association were indulged in until 9:30, when "business" was proceeded with, viz., selling the dainties contained in the baskets, the money of the owner not being given until after the sale was consummated, when it was the purchaser's privilege to seek out the young lady and ask her to take her supper with him.

Mr. T. J. Bigstaff kindly volunteered to act as auctioneer for the occasion, and whether by certain looks or signs of his, or the fact of the owners giving him to understand that they were not, but from the way certain baskets, that looked much like other certain baskets, were so quickly started and "bid up," it looked like knowledge had been imparted that taught the boys how and when to bid. After the sale was general "pairing off," and inviting friends to join them, and as there was ample food in every basket for from three to five persons, it was with reluctance that the young men left their baskets enough for all the young men present to buy one, as much might have been wasted.

Too much cannot be said for our young ladies in regard to their deep interest in the Association; and do you wonder? It is to benefit their brothers and young men friends. But they have never yet refused or hesitated to do anything asked, for its help. It is to be hoped with the beginning of the year a "women's committee," or ladies' auxiliary, will be added to the Young Men's Christian.

After the business men's meeting last Sunday, the Board of Directors met, and extended a call to D. D. Taylor, of Tennessee, to come to us as General Secretary.

This was the subject of the meeting, the Board having had the matter under consideration for some days. The talk of Mr. Orser, as agreed upon by the present, was one full of good land sense, and the way which every father in our city should look at this matter of our boys.

LAND, STOCK AND CROP

S. P. Yearly went to Cincinnati Saturday with a load of hogs and returned Tuesday. He says the buyers over there charge Republicans 20c for a shave, owing to their faces being so long.—Record-Homestead.

1892 tobacco is being stripped, and we have learned of quite a number of crops which have been sold at prices ranging from $10 upwards.

Corn is being delivered here at the following prices: $1.75, $1.90 and $2 per barrel, owing to the quantity and quality.

J. W. Clark and Brack Gillespie sold to English Bros. 50 head of export cattle average 1,700 pounds at 5 cents.

J. W. Clark sold to same 25 head of export cattle average 1,000 lb at 4 1/2 cents.

Power hogs are being fattened in this county this fall than ever before known.

T. A. Cheenalt has sold his 100-acre place near Waco to Isaac Gilbert, of Knox county, for $2,700.—Richmond Register.

There were some 500 cattle on the market yesterday. While prices ruled low, the large part of the offerings were sold.

There was a fair-sized crowd in town yesterday and the merchants report a good day's business.

THE ADVOCATE.

HORSE AND TRACK.

Kremlin, 2:07 1/2, is still King.

If you mean to trot a colt as a yearling, says Marvin, work him twice a day. Make the lessons short and sharp.

The first horse that trots a mile in two minutes will average forty-four feet a second.

Stimoleon cut his record to 2:13 at Nashville. This gives Stimoleon four in the 2:15 list.

The sulky builders are now busy devising vehicles that will make the records take another tumble in 1893.

Martha Wilkes 2:08 wears ten-ounce shoes and four-ounce weights forward. She carries a four-ounce plate behind.

Eight Palo Alto bred horses entered the 2:30 list this year.

Many a cheap stallion that is making debts for an owner would sell off gelded at a remunerative figure if gelded.

There are now only four living sons of Hambletonian that have twenty-five or more 2:30 performers, they being Strathmore, Egbert, Dictator, and Harold. The chances are that the two last named will not live until spring.

It is a very easy matter to find a market for good geldings that are four or five years old from the fact that the demand is increasing.

Doble has Jack 2:13, Martha Wilkes 2:08, Roma 2:13, Edgewood 2:14, and the Astell filly Tarentelle at Nashville.

One of the brood mares that entered the 2:30 list this season is Spanish Maiden, the dam of Margrave, that has a two-year-old record of 2:19. Spanish Maiden is a daughter of Happy Medium and is a great brood mare.

Two stallions, Elector and Alcyon, have two trotters apiece in the 2:10 list.

The good horses are not all found in any one family.

Five new 2:20 performers were added to Happy Medium's this year.

Daughters of Alcyon produced 14 of this years new 2:30 performers.

Twelve yearlings have beaten 2:30. Of these seven are trotters and five pacers, and six of them have obtained their records this year.

The day St. Valentine reduced his record to 2:13, he weighed 1,400 pounds.

There was a meeting of the business men of the city at the Y. M. C. A. rooms on Sunday evening, to consider what steps should be taken to put that institution on a more solid basis. Mr. E. C. O'neal made a splendid address and at some length discussed the matter from a business man's standpoint. His remarks were well received and made a deep impression on his audience. Hon. J. L. Ellison followed with a shorter but no less admirable speech, and before he had finished the audience had made up its mind that, no matter what the cost, the good work must be strengthened and extended. Of the directors, two or three made short and mainly explanatory talks. Money has been secured for both rooms, a contract is closed for a Secretary of ability and experience, and canvassers will be among the business men within the next few days to secure funds so as to render the institution much more effective in the future than it has ever yet been. No man who has a boy, or who hasn't one, can afford to render substantial aid to this engine for good that has been established in our midst.

A Clark county genius has secured a patent on an incubator that will hatch nothing but roosters. In the light of the recent great Democratic victory he has a fortune in his grasp.—Winchester Democrat.

Some sharp, acrid personal articles have been appearing in the Sentinel and Eagle, two newspapers published at Estill, Ky. To one on the outside it would appear as blood on the moon. Personalities in a newspaper is in bad taste. We do not know which is the aggressor, but since the campaign is over, a make up is in order and should be entertained. Life is too short and time too precious to engage in this kind of strife, when envy and hate are the principal actors.

County Superintendent's Report of Schools.

Sideview District, No. 2.—Reports 67 pupil children; draws $168.34; highest number at school 34, lowest 30, present 33; Miss Sallie McDonald, the teacher, of first-class qualifications and several years experience; the attendance is too small; it is to be hoped that the trustees and patrons are not losing interest; trustees, G. W. Denton, S. S. Priest and P. King, have not visited school; an effort should be made to keep the reputation of this district up to the high plain it has occupied so long; some of the brightest and most advanced school girls are found here; patrons supplement school fund.

Donaldson District, No. 31.—Reports 60 pupil children; draws $128; E. P. Gifford, teacher, is doing good work, keeping "both eyes" on the mental training of the children of this neighborhood; school progressive, pupils bright and busy all the time; highest number 37, lowest 12, present 37; daily recitations 21; trustees, T. Moore, John Jones and Samuel Wade; the latter visits school according to law; nice new house and good home-made furniture, paid for without any tax.

St. Sterling Suburban District, No. 32.—Reports 131 pupil children; draws $328.81 from the State; highest number in attendance 67, lowest 35 (show day), present 64; Miss Ranne Burroughs, so well and so long and so favorably known as an educator, is principal, Miss Maud Quisenberry, a young and zealous teacher, first assistant; this is the new district made of portions of all the districts bordering upon the city limits; school bids fair to be a success; all the schools in the city receive patronage from this district, hence the low average attendance; house could be made more attractive on the inside without seriously improving the exterior; daily recitations 30; trustees, Robert Tilton, T. McVernale and Robert Fletcher, all good officers; they visit school regularly; two pupils from district No. 8 and one from district No. 6, have been transferred to this.

Duff District, No. 7.—Reports 96 pupil children; draws $241.92; number enrolled 61; highest number present 44, lowest 14, present 32; several absent attending funeral in the neighborhood; Miss Alice Estes, the popular, whole-souled teacher, is giving perfect satisfaction, paying little attention to the little ones and the large ones; children are learning fast, and they know it; daily recitations 32; trustees, J. T. Coons, Dr. N. F. Pierce and Richard Conner; might take a little more interest in their school; appropriate Columbus exercises; nice flag; house should be repaired and the school should be continued three months longer.
